From the foreword by Anglican Archbishop David Moxon:

Dick Tripp, in this comprehensive expression of the biblical mandate of caring for God's creation has provided Christians with a detailed biblical approach to the growing crisis in our environment, its causes, the role of the Christian church and the challenge that lies before us all. Dick's work provides the biblical and spiritual motivation we need to move forward at this critical time. Readers of this well-researched and intelligently-argued resource will be given an irresistible biblical vision and mandate to redeem what is being despoiled.

CONTENTS: The growing crisis • Causes of the problem • The modern environmental movement • The positive and negative influence of Christianity • The modern Christian emphasis on caring for creation • Lessons from Genesis 1 • Humans in God's image • The spoilt image and its effect on creation • God's covenant with Noah • Lessons from Israel • Christ and creation • The church and creation • The renewal of creation • The new heavens and earth
